cooperation on higher education between the two Agencies.

Professor Rasheed pointed out that the Commission valued its relationship with AFD, especially for its commitment and support to Africa Centres of Excellence (ACE) Impact Projects. He expressed the Commission's appreciation to the Agency for its interest and contribution to ACE, which had significantly increased funding of the project.

He said that the intervention of AFD in ACE Impact and strategic support for Higher Education (HE) with a wider scope in education through scholarships and other remarkable interventions had made the Agency popular in the Nigerian University System (NUS).

The NUC Scribe also stated that with the collaboration of AFD, preparations were underway for quality assurance assessment of ACE Health programmes in University of Jos (UNIJOS) and Ahmadu Bello University (ABU), Zaria and subsequent assessment of Agriculture in Bayero University (BUK), Kano, Federal University of Agriculture Abeokuta (FUNAAB), and Benue State University (BSU), Makurdi.

He stressed that all ACEs would go through accreditation by Higher Council for Evaluation of Research and Higher Education (Hecres), which was the French accreditation agency to assure quality and ensure common standards in all the Centres.

The Executive Secretary informed Country Director that the Commission had considered reviewing the guidelines on Open and Distance Learning (ODL) and trans-border education through direct interaction, establishment of campuses and involvement of some agencies in e-learning to further open up space and provide access to quality university education in Nigeria.

He said that the Commission had identified AFD as one of the key partners to deliberate on those issues, stressing that the future of Nigerian universities did not only rely on research and teaching, but also, on their willingness to open doors to diverse international partnerships.

He stated that the Commission was reviewing the curriculum of the NUS and when funds were made available, it would work on the blueprint on the strategic plans on university education in Nigeria. He, therefore, solicited the input of AFD on the draft documents.

Professor Rasheed further stated that the Commission had signed Memoranda of Understanding (MoU) with Francophone universities on Quality Assurance mechanisms, mobility, scholarship and language promotion especially French in Nigeria. He noted that most people from francophone countries understood a little bit of English, while on the other hand, those in Anglophone could hardly speak French.

He attributed the language barrier as impediment to effective collaborations and partnerships among universities within the West African region. He proffered that through exchange programmes, some students could study in France which could encourage diverse perspectives and worldview. He elaborated that encouraging foreign studies in France and provision of scholarship opportunities would also improve research network and knowledge-economy which had been globally identified as key to national development.

The Executive Secretary also said that during the upcoming meeting between the two agencies between October and November 2019, the Commission would exploit the opportunity and make arrangement for public lecture in select fields to be delivered by AFD for interested Nigerian universities. He explained that the proposed forum would provide the opportunity to address some issues and deepen students' understanding of those issues.

In line with that, the Commission had constituted 39 visitation panels to 78 to inspect and assess the facilities including classes,

He said that Vice-Chancellors would also be contacted on strategic areas that needed AFD interventions with bias to Physical facilities.

He said that NUC would liaise with National Higher Education Regulatory Agencies to engage and agree on key areas that needed intervention in Higher education. He noted that the area that needed urgent intervention in Nigerian universities was provision of standard

Professor Rasheed disclosed that as part of its commitment towards provision of standard facilities for conducive learning environment by students, the Commission through its Directorate of Student Support would soon embark on assessment of students' facilities in selected universities that would serve as pilot models as currently there was no empirical accommodation, libraries, power supply, security gadgets and general sanitation as well as survey on teaching and learning, among others.

He, therefore, solicited AFD's support and partnership in providing standard accommodation in some universities. He reiterated that it should be under strict guidance of NUC in accordance with the master plans of the select universities.

The Executive Secretary also assured that the Commission would work in synergy with the Federal Ministries of Education and Finance to facilitate the approval of requests by AFD on contributions towards education in Nigeria. He also reassured that the Commission would be committed towards getting the support of the new 9th National Assembly on higher education agenda.

Speaking on their mission, the Country Officer, Mr. Larrouze said that it was to discuss possible areas of AFD intervention in the NUS and how to interface through NUC Blueprint on higher education.

He stated that French influence in the NUS was becoming more visible and pronounced through the intervention of AFD in education sector. He said that the Agency was already into strong partnership with NUC and the NUS, which was a very important aspect of the cooperation between Nigeria and France.

The Country Officer said that in line with President Emmanuel Macron's policy on education, AFD was determined to be active partner in Higher Education not only in funding but also through technical support. On partnership with the NUS through e-learning, Mr. Larrouze said that AFD would only be able to contribute in that aspect when it had seen the guidelines provided by NUC to that effect.

In his contribution, the Deputy Country Director, Mr. Hue explained that Nigeria-France cooperation had been an impressive partnership in all spheres and French government was trying to expand its portfolio in French cooperation and financing French programmes in the NUS.

Mr. Hue said that AFD had new mandate which entailed working in line with Higher education blueprint and also active participation in ACE Impact in partnership with World Bank, towards better financing of the project through NUC's guidance.

He said that towards the end of the year in November, AFD would hold a stakeholders' forum on its activities especially in ACE and the role of Hecres in quality assurance as well as other projects in education sector. He also disclosed that by July, AFD was expected to send progress report on its activities to French government, requesting that NUC should assist in forwarding a report on ACE Impact which would form part of the report to be sent to the home government.

AFD, the socio-economic development agency of French government which funds, supports and encourages transition to a better world towards Sustainable Development Goals.

Also present were NUC's Directors of Executive Secretary's Office, Mr. Chris Maiyaki; Accreditation, Dr Noel Salihu; International Cooperation and Liaison Services, Mrs Constance Goddy-Nnadi; Inspection and Monitoring; Mr. Boniface Odum as well as Ag. JAMB Used 7000 Resource Persons For 2019 JAMB —— Prof. Oloyede

The Registrar, Joint Admission and Matriculation Board (JAMB), Professor Is-haq Olarewaju Oloyede last week said whatever achievement people thought was achieved by the Board could only be ascribed to the Ministerial support it received in carrying out its mandate after his assumption of office in August 2016.

Speaking at the National Youth Service Corps (NYSC) Pre-mobilisation workshop for stakeholders held at the Merit House, Abuja, Professor Oloyede noted that only few Nigerians believed in the capacity of JAMB to deliver on its mandate due to perceived wrath in the system.

He stressed that irrespective of his introduction of the Computer Based Centres (CBT) and e-testing in the Nigerian tertiary education system when he was Vice-Chancellor there where chronic pessimists and inveterate critics who gave him no breathing space as, he decided to stop the use of the paper and pencil format in Unified Tertiary Matriculation Examination (UTME).

The Registrar described the administration of the UTME as a collective effort of stakeholders and a crucial national assignment. He recounted that about 7,000 human resources were at the disposal of the Board for the conduct of the 2019 examination, whereas the entire workforce of JAMB was less than 1,800 across all the states of the Federation.

Prof. Is-haq Olarewaju Oloyede

He said the diversity in mobilizing officials for the UTME had given him the idea of the remoteness of organised crime targeted against the Board's examinations.

According to him, the given circumstances and nature of the organised crime perpetrated by evil-minded persons made it difficult for JAMB in 2017 to adopt the international best practice of pre-release clinical scrutiny of the result of the examination. This, he said, was especially more so when one was aware of how endemic the rot had been since the period of the Paper and Pencil Test until the recent introduction of CBT.

He stated with a sense of pride that JAMB released the 2017 and 2018 UTME results almost within 24 hours of each session to convince the doubting Thomas's that the expeditious release of CBT results was not beyond JAMB capacity. After the release of the 2018 result JAMB publicly announced that the result of 2019 UTME would not be released until they subject the procedure to some scrutiny with a view to ascertaining the degree of success of the structures, infrastructure, policies and processes put in place to checkmate the processes. This he noted was able to fish out not very few among JAMB staff who believed in the pervasive illegitimate means of truncating the Board's set ambitions and goals.

On the synergy with the NYSC, Professor Oloyede highlighted that likewise in the mobilization process, tertiary institutions were in the habit of sending names of graduates to JAMB for confirmation that were plagued with lot of challenges. This, he stressed, include multiple registrations, falsification of Age, wrong spelling of names, improper admissions processes, among others.

The JAMB boss noted that applicants for change of date of birth being forwarded to JAMB by institutions were mostly from over-aged persons who wanted to get mobilized for the national service. He explained that since his assumption of duty as Registrar, JAMB had been taking measures to block sharp practices, while also seeking enhanced inter-agency renewed commitment to eliminating such practices and anomalies.

He said that the menace of multiple registrations was yet to abate as over N200 million was still paid to JAMB by the syndicate to correct data relating to pre-meditated name error. There were many ways multiple registrations manifests, according to him, while the rich procure graduates and senior undergraduates to write examinations in the name of their pampered children who then uses the highest score to get admission into institutions.

Prof. Oloyede said the Board this year had deployed appropriate technologies to detect not only the facial duplication of candidates but also the biometric multiplications. He reiterated that the Board had also gone as far as identifying identical twins and siblings whose existence were recognised.

He said one of the major strategies of JAMB to counter this include the introduction of a short code where every candidate was required to type his or her name personally through the phone and send it directly to 55019. This, he said, was to eliminate the issue of error in names spelling since they register themselves using their phones and all messages were sent to their phone numbers.

The Registrar lamented that most institutions were the cause of the problem of mobilisation of corps members. He identified some of the challenges to include; Institutions denying Post UTME test to disqualify candidates; Admitting unqualified candidates on awaiting result; Warehousing candidates from pre-degree programmes; Stratification of candidates into programmes before summation of scores; Lowering of merit aggregate cut-off mark to jump others as well as Cutting off merit before 45%.

This according to Professor Oloyede result to candidates graduating without passing through the proper admission processes set out by JAMB. This lead to most institutions sending a long list of names for re-regularizations with the payment of N5, 000 fees to JAMB after collecting over N10, 000 from candidates. He said JAMB had introduced what he called 'indemnity form', which would be dully signed by the Vice-Chancellor before any candidate could be re-regularized and sent for NYSC mobilization.

He added that JAMB was working hard to ensure a smooth mobilization process of corps members for national assignment in collaboration with NUC, NYSC and other relevant stakeholders. He submitted that without sincerity and synergy with tertiary institutions all efforts would remain futile.

The presentation by the JAMB Registrar drew applause from the gathering who agreed with him that sanity had been restored to a great deal in the organisation of the Board's examination.

JAMB, which disclosed this in its weekly bulletin last weekend, noted that the policy meeting would take place in Gbogan, Osun State, and would be chaired by the Permanent Secretary of the Federal Ministry of Education, Arch Sunny Echono.

The management of the Board state that the clarification became necessary following speculations that it has already fixed the 2019 UTME cut-off marks. The board added that candidates should not also believe rumours that a candidate could have two different results released by the server.

JAMB's Head of Public Affairs, Dr Fabian Benjamin, said such different results were not possible, while warning “gullible and desperate criminal elements

“These were the set of candidates claiming to have two results. It is practically impossible to have two results. This is because we don't send results. Rather, it is the candidates that would send ‘Results’ to 55019 and the result is subsequently transmitted to the respective candidates.

“The results are fortified with state-of-the-art security features that render the efforts of any syndicate or fraudster a nullity. One of such features was the unique barcode on each result to safeguard it.”

ESSAY CONTEST

The Nigerian Economic Summit Group (NESG) in partnership with the National Universities Commission (NUC) is pleased to announce the theme for the Nigerian Economic Summit (NES) 25th Anniversary Essay Competition- "Enhancing Confidence in Nigeria for Nation Building: towards economic success and improved quality of life for Nigerians"

Trust is the social glue that holds families, communities, organizations and societies together, without it, reaching any agreement can become a fraught negotiation. – Peggy (Rockefeller) Dulany, Synergos

With a global shift towards 'inclusive' economic growth, it is argued that economic prosperity and business success cannot be adequately explained by abundance of natural resources, brilliance of intellect, or the presence of good laws and institutions. Rather, economic prosperity requires (in addition to the above elements listed) a culture of trust and social capital that forms an economic input (Fukuyama, 1995).

In the light of challenges that have constantly plagued the Nigerian economy despite being the largest African economy, Nigeria has remained a low-trust country and this has resulted in a slow-paced growth.

With an outlook of building a nation that is competitive and sustainable, Nigeria sets to embark on the long march towards economic growth and improved quality of life for its people. Bearing in mind the highly diverse nature of Nigeria, we cannot therefore shy away from the arduous task of rebuilding trust and confidence in her people. It is on this premise that the NESG calls for applicants for the essay competition.
